

Champagne

2.2.1

Fill in the blank.

Champagne is an important region for winemaking and history. The region was on the front lines of _____ in 1914.

Champagne can only come from this region, and there are very strict laws controlling its production.

Even though it's very cold and near the _____ parallel, Champagne still produces world-class wine.

Think about the following and feel free to write your response.

Why is the name Champagne significant to the world beyond wine consumers?
What does it represent?

Cristie Norman's Online Wine Course for Complete Beginners

Bordeaux

2.2.2

Fill in the blank.

There are two major subregions of Bordeaux: the _____ Bank and the _____ Bank. They are separated by the _____ Estuary.

Bordeaux Red wine is typically a blend of grapes including _____, _____ and _____. Petit Verdot, Malbec and Carménère are also used.

There are 5 First Growths in Bordeaux. All are located on the Left Bank. They are:

1. _____
2. _____
3. _____
4. _____
5. _____

And they are made of up predominately _____ grapes.

Cristie Norman's Online Wine Course for Complete Beginners

Burgundy

2.2.3

Fill in the blank.

There are two major grape varieties grown in Burgundy:

_____ and _____.

Moving from North to South, the regions are as follows:

1. _____

2. _____

Which is made up of _____

and _____

3. _____

4. _____

5. _____

Cristie Norman's Online Wine Course for Complete Beginners

Burgundy (continued)

2.2.3

Fill in the blank.

Beaujolais is known for growing and producing wines made with _____, instead of Pinot Noir.

Think about the following and feel free to write your response.

In a region as geographically complex as Burgundy, how does terroir influence the wines here?

How have negociants and Napoleonic Inheritance Code impacted the region?

What effect has this had on winemaking and prices in the region?

Cristie Norman's Online Wine Course for Complete Beginners

Southwest France: Rhone and Provence

2.2.4

Fill in the blank.

The Rhone is divided into two regions: the _____ and the _____.

The Southern Rhone makes red wine with as many as _____ different varieties, including: _____, _____ and _____.

_____ is the most famous area of the Southern Rhone.

Provence has become more well-known recently, thanks to the popularity of _____. Here, these wines are light, dry and crisp.

Cristie Norman's Online Wine Course for Complete Beginners